

Problems running the game under Win7

Posted by The Other - 13 Jun 2012 03:05

---

Hi all!

I'm having some problems running DLR under Win7 (not totally unexpected!), and frankly I don't know enough technical stuff to even guess what the exact problem is.

I eventually managed to install the game (I won't say how, as I'm not sure if it's technically legal), and now have all files where they should be. The game starts more-or-less properly - there are some weird colour glitches, but not enough to be a major issue.

The real problem occurs after I start the game and enter either a campaign or single scenario. As soon as I scroll the map or enter certain menus, the game freezes - permanently, requiring me to close it via Task Manager. In effect, this makes the game entirely unplayable.

Does anybody know what causes this, and is there a way to fix or avoid it?

=====

Re: Problems running the game under Win7

Posted by The Other - 20 Jun 2012 02:02

---

I've never had any issue running things from Program Files - off the top of my head, I have at least a dozen games and other applications in that folder, and have never noticed any problem. I got this computer second-hand - the guy who owned it before might have applied some setting that allows this? Like I said before, I'm not very technically-minded, and frankly I don't have a clue how/why computers do anything!

In the case of DLR specifically, I did click 'Run as administrator' - but I haven't done this for various other programs, all of which seem to work fine. All very peculiar...

=====